Achieving the Dream

MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIRMAN OF THE EDUCATIONAL TRUST

In the previous issue of the Chakett, Grand Alpha Rich Lane, wrote about taking Chi Phi to the next level. He concluded his statements by asking our Brotherhood to join him in making Chi Phi the most respected and admired Fraternity in America.

I would like to take this opportunity to expand on those same sentiments and elaborate on what we believe America's premiere college fraternity should look like.

Unquestionably, Greek Letter Fraternities were founded on very noble purposes and if you were to research the collective Mission Statements of those organizations, you would discover a common ideology with references to moral character, leadership and friendship.

That said, how do we identify the best from the rest? If we agree that, the stated objective of fraternities is to build better men and tomorrow's leaders, then those Fraternities that are judged the best, are those who regularly and visibly excel at their stated mission.

Since 1824, The Chi Phi Fraternity has existed for the purpose of promoting brotherhood and individual growth through truth, honor, friendship, personal integrity and academic excellence.

To be the best that we can be, we must be fully dedicated to making that statement a reality.

Any vision statement without action is merely a dream. Stated goals, no matter how virtuous or well intentioned, are meaningless without the necessary level of commitment.

The Grand Council and Educational Trust have jointly developed a strategic plan that we feel will position us for the challenges of tomorrow.

Gone are the days when one or two National Staff members and a handful of volunteers could handle the challenges of today's fraternity world. The opportunity for expansion and the competition for new members are much more limited on today's college and university campuses. Other fraternities with larger national staffs have enjoyed the luxury of assigning full-time staff members to the development of these areas.

Several years ago, our leadership committed to a planned expansion of our National Staff. We have been gradually adding professionals who possess expertise in the areas of, communications, chapter services, member and program development, expansion and alumni relations. During the past winter, the final piece of the staffing model was completed with the hiring of a full time Director of Alumni Development.

Chi Phi can now boast of a National staff that is second to none.

However, even with a group of all-stars staffing the National Office, one additional element is needed to insure our future success.

To be the best or even one of the best college fraternities we must do a better job of engaging our alumni. The concept of Brotherhood must extend and develop the fraternal experience beyond simple undergraduate membership. The success of our mission requires a sustained involvement. Brother Lane's vision for our Fraternity is unattainable without the appropriate level of commitment from our entire membership.

With so many outstanding alumni members, there should be no limit to what we can achieve.

We sincerely hope you will share and support our vision for the future of Chi Phi.

In the bonds,

Dr Jim Soderquist, Alpha 1967
Chairman, Chi Phi Educational Trust

GOVERNORS

Chi Phi Fraternity was the first fraternity founded

IN THE UNITED STATES ON DECEMBER 24, 1824. SINCE THAT DAY, WE HAVE BEEN SHAPING COLLEGE CAMPUSES AND THE NATION THROUGH OUR MEMBERS AND THEIR DRIVE TO MAKE SOCIETY BETTER. THE FRATERNITY HAS BEEN THE BREEDING GROUND FOR MANY POLITICIANS IN MOST ASPECTS OF GOVERNMENT. THE FOLLOWING IS A BRIEF ACCOUNT OF THE NINE MEN WHO HAVE SERVED AS GOVERNOR AND ARE MEMBERS OF CHI PHI FRATERNITY.

William Dorsey Jelks, (Iota, Mercer University, 1876), the thirty-second Governor of Alabama, was born November 7, 1855, at Warrior Stand, Alabama. In 1879, Jelks bought and became the editor of the Eufaula Times. During his residence in Eufaula, Jelks served on the board and as superintendent of education for the city schools.

Elected to the State Senate from Barbour County in 1898, Jelks served as chairman of the Committee on Constitution, Constitutional Revision, and Amendment. In 1900, he was elected President of the Senate. There being no office of lieutenant governor under the State Constitution of 1875, Jelks, by virtue of his position as president of the Senate, served as acting-governor during the temporary incapacitation of Governor William J. Samford from December 1-26, 1900, and succeeded to the office on June 11, 1901, when Samford died.

As governor, Jelks played an active role in securing the ratification of the State Constitution of 1901, which, by executive proclamation, he offered into effect on Thanksgiving Day, 1901. The new constitution reinstated the office of lieutenant governor and established the term of office of governor as four years. Elected to his first full term in 1902, Jelks was the first Alabama governor elected to serve a four-year term.

Significant accomplishments during Jelks' administration included the passage of legislation limiting and regulating child labor; the establishment of the State Textbook Commission; the reforms of the State Railroad Commission and the convict lease system; the renovation and expansion of the State Capitol; and the creation of Houston County.

The legislature prohibited manufacturers from employing children under twelve years of age or working them more than sixty-six hours per week. (Acts of Alabama, 1903. No. 57. p. 68)

Public indignation with the high freight rates charged by the railroads resulted in a reform of the State Railroad Commission, whereby the commissioners began to be directly elected in 1903. Jelks' understanding of the workings of the commission was inadequate and although he viewed the change to direct election of commissioners with apprehension, he signed the bill into law.

When Jelks left office in 1907, he had served longer than any governor before him. He left a cash balance in the treasury of $1.8 million, which he recommended be spent on education. After leaving office, he organized the Protective Life Insurance Company in Birmingham and served as its first president. He was a delegate to the 1912 Democratic Convention in Baltimore that nominated Woodrow Wilson to the presidency. Jelks died on December 14, 1931.

Joseph M. Brown, (Lambda, Oglethorpe, 1872), was born on December 28, 1851 in Canton, Georgia, and was a descendant of Joseph E. Brown, Georgia's

Civil War governor. Brown graduated from Oglethorpe University in 1872 and passed the bar in 1873, after studying at his brother's office as well as at Harvard University. Brown did not pursue law due to bad eye sight; instead he attended a business college in Atlanta. He chose the railroad business as his career, and his first position was as a clerk for the Western Atlantic Railroad. By 1889, he had risen to the position of traffic manager. That same year, on February 12, he married Cora Annie McCord.

In 1904, Governor Joseph Terrell appointed Brown to the State Railroad Commission, where he remained until Governor Hoke Smith suspended him on August 21, 1907, over a disagreement concerning railroad passenger rates. Brown voted against an order lowering passenger rates and this angered Governor Smith. In the gubernatorial election of 1908, Brown challenged Smith. Although he made no public speeches and gave just fifteen newspaper statements, Brown won the election and took office on June 26, 1909. Brown's victory derived chiefly from voters' dissatisfaction with Smith's policies, which had resulted in significant economic hardships for many Georgians. Brown used this to his advantage with such slogans as "Hoke and Hunger, Brown and Bread." During the election, he also supported reduced taxes, prohibition, the establishment of a department of labor, and anti-lobby legislation. Brown's adversarial relationship with Hoke Smith persisted through Brown's term as governor.

Hoke Smith challenged Brown for the governor's seat again in 1910. Smith defeated Brown by such a narrow margin that Brown chose to run as an independent candidate in the general election. Smith defeated Brown in the general election by a much greater margin. When Hoke Smith chose to leave the governor's office to fill U.S. Senator Alexander S. Clay's unexpired term in 1912, Brown ran unopposed for the open gubernatorial seat. Brown took office on January 12, 1912. Following his term as governor, Brown challenged Smith for his Senate seat in 1914. Smith won the election, and Brown never returned to politics.

After his time in public office, Brown served as director and vice president of First National Bank of Marietta for ten years. He also owned and operated Cherokee Mills in Marietta. Brown wrote many books including The Mountain Campaigns of Georgia and Astyanax. Joseph M. Brown died on March 3, 1932.

John Slaton, (Eta, 1886), was Georgia's sixtieth governor, serving two terms, 1911-12 and 1913-15. He was also a state representative and state senator, and he practiced law in Atlanta.

Slaton was the son of William Franklin Slaton and Nancy Jane Martin and was born on December 25, 1866, near Greenville in Meriwether County. After the Civil War, his father came to Atlanta, where he was superintendent of the public schools.

He received a Master of Arts degree with highest honors from the University of Georgia in 1886 and was admitted to the bar in 1887. He began working at the firm Glenn, Slaton, and Phillips.

Slaton was elected to the Georgia House of Representatives from Fulton County in 1896 and served until 1909. During the last four of these years, he also served as Speaker of the House. In 1909, he was elected to the state senate from the Thirty-fifth District, a position he held until 1913. Serving as president of the senate, Slaton was appointed acting governor after Governor Hoke Smith was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1911. Slaton served in that capacity from 1911 to 1912, when Joseph M. Brown won a term as governor. Subsequently, Slaton was elected to the governorship in his own right and served from 1913 to 1915.

After his governorship Slaton never held another elected position. He served as president of the Georgia Bar Association in 1928-29 and chaired the Board of Law Examiners for twenty-nine years. Slaton died on January 11, 1955, in Atlanta.

Nathaniel E. Harris (Eta, 1870) was born January 21, 1846, near Jonesboro, Tennessee, and later moved with his family to Pine Log, Georgia. Harris attended Martin Academy until the outbreak of the Civil War. At age 16, he joined the Confederate infantry and eventually became an officer in the 16th Virginia Calvary. He entered the University of Georgia in 1867 as a sophomore with the financial support of Alexander H. Stephens. Upon graduating from the university in 1870, Harris began studying law in Sparta, Georgia. He would eventually go on to receive his LL.D. degree from the University of Georgia in 1910.

In 1873, Harris moved to Macon where he practiced law with Walter Hill for the next 27 years. He was not confined to private practice, however, serving as city attorney from 1874 to 1882. Harris went on to serve as a representative in the state legislature from 1882 to 1885. It was during his term in the General Assembly that Harris achieved one of his greatest accomplishments: founding Georgia School of Technology (later the Georgia Institute of Technology) in 1885. He served not only as the chair of the supervising committee for the school's establishment but also as the chair of the board of trustees until his death in 1929. Harris's interest in education also led him to introduce a bill calling for compulsory education.

Harris also served in the Georgia Senate from 1894 to 1895 and as judge of the Superior Court of the Macon Circuit from 1912 until his resignation in 1915. Rather than finishing his term, Harris chose to run for governor of Georgia as a Democrat and was successful, taking office June 26, 1915, making him the last Confederate veteran to serve as governor. Harris helped pass an act that allowed Georgia banks to join the Federal Reserve. He was a staunch prohibitionist, and in 1917 succeeded in prohibiting the shipment of liquor to or through Georgia. He also helped to send an act through the state legislature forbidding the sale of intoxicating liquor. Harris signed legislation to require licensing of all motor vehicles and won authorization for a state highway commission. He also put payment of teachers on a regular schedule and supported a mandatory four-month school term for children between 8 and 14 years old.

Upon leaving office, Harris returned to Macon to practice law. His days of public service were not over, however. From 1924 to 1925, he served as Pension Commissioner of Georgia while at the same time serving as president of the Electoral College of Georgia. Harris was also a member of the board of trustees of both Wesleyan College and the University of Georgia. Nathaniel Harris died in Hampton, Tennessee, on September 21, 1929.

Hiram Warren Johnson, (Lambda, 1888), held his first job as a shorthand reporter and stenographer in a law firm, which sparked his interest in the subject. In 1888, Johnson was admitted to the University of California at Berkeley, where he earned his law degree. In 1902, he moved to San Francisco, where he served as an assistant district attorney. In the midst of his legal practice, Johnson became increasingly active in reform politics, taking on an anti-corruption mantle. In 1910, he became part of the Lincoln-Roosevelt Party and then founded the United States Progressive Party in 1912. Johnson was the nominee for Vice President of the United States on the Progressive ticket in 1912 with Theodore Roosevelt. He served as governor of California between 1911 and 1917, where he led successful fights for institution of initiative, referendum and recall laws, the direct primary election, the eight-hour work day for women and children, the Workers Compensation Act, pensions for retired teachers, and more government control of the railroads and utilities.

It was not until 1919 that Johnson became the presumptive leader of the Progressives, due to the death of Theodore Roosevelt. As a U.S. Senator, Johnson proved to be popular and was re-elected four times being on several committees including: Chairman, Committee on Cuban Relations (Sixty-sixth Congress); Committee on Patents (Sixty-seventh Congress); Committee on Immigration (Sixty-eighth through Seventy-first Congresses); Committee on Territories and Insular Possessions (Sixty-eighth Congress); and Committee on Commerce (Seventy-first and Seventy-second Congresses). After serving for nearly 30 years in government, he died on August 6, 1945, the same day the atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima.

Vernon Wallace Thomson, (Kappa, 1927), was born in Richland Center, Wisconsin, on November 5, 1905; graduated from Richland Center High School in 1923; attended Carroll College in Waukesha, from 1923-1925; graduated from University of Wisconsin in 1927; taught at Viroqua High School, from 1927-1929; graduated from the University of Wisconsin Law School in 1932; engaged in private practice of law, in Richland Center, Wis., from 1932-1951; served as assistant district attorney of Richland County, from 1933-1935, and as city attorney, from 1933-1937 and 1942-1944; was mayor of Richland Center from April 1944 to February 1951; served as member of the State assembly, from 1935-1951, as speaker, from 1939-1945, and as Republican floor leader during 1945-1951.

Also, Thomson, became the state attorney general, in 1951-1957; was Governor of Wisconsin from January 7, 1957, to January 5, 1959; was a delegate for the Republican National Conventions in 1936, 1940, 1952, and 1956; was elected as a Republican to the Eighty-seventh Congress; was reelected to the six succeeding Congresses and served from January 3, 1961, until his resignation December 31, 1974. Unfortunately, however, Thomson was an unsuccessful candidate for reelection in 1974 to the Ninety-fourth Congress. Soon thereafter, he became a member of the Federal Election Commission, from April 1975 to June 1979 and January 1981 to December 1981; was a resident of McLean, Virginia, until his death in Washington, D.C., on April 2, 1988; and was buried in Richland Center Cemetery, Richland Center, Wisconsin.

Dolph Briscoe, (Nu, 1945), was the descendant of a signer of the Texas Declaration of Independence. His father was a close friend of Governor Ross Sterling, who once allowed young Briscoe to sleep in Sam Houston's bed in the Governor's mansion. Briscoe graduated from the University of Texas in 1942 and then joined the Army, serving in the China-Burma-India theater. He served in the legislature from 1949-57, where he promoted farm-to-market roads, which greatly enhanced the livelihood of rural Texans. He then left politics to manage his family's ranching and business interests, becoming one of the state's leading ranchers. He spearheaded efforts to eradicate the screwworm, a deadly menace to cattle.

Briscoe was an attractive candidate to voters seeking an outsider untainted by the Sharpstown affair. As governor, he took a conservative approach, concentrating on more efficient administration of existing services rather than adding new ones. He kept his campaign promise of “no new taxes,” the only Texas governor of the modern era to hold that line. He did back increased spending for highway improvements and signed into law the Texas Open Records Act, which protects the public’s right to access to government agencies and records.

He was the first governor to be elected to a four-year term with his victory in 1974 (previous governors had served two-year terms). Voters denied Briscoe another term in 1978.

Briscoe returned to Uvalde to manage his vast ranching and business interests. Today, he serves as senior chairman of the First State Bank in Uvalde and continues to be active in all phases of cattle ranching.

Carl Sanders, (Eta, 1945), is best remembered as Georgia’s first New South governor, a Democrat who provided progressive leadership for the state from 1963 to 1967. By implementing an array of reforms during a turbulent period, Sanders greatly enhanced Georgia’s national image. In addition to his political achievements, he had successful careers in both business and law.

Settling in his hometown of Augusta, Sanders practiced law and began his political career in 1954, easily winning a seat in the Georgia house. Two years later, he advanced to the state senate, where he quickly emerged as a leader. After a stint as Governor Ernest Vandiver’s floor leader, he served two years as president pro tempore of the senate.

The ambitious and urbane Sanders defeated the folksy former governor and arch-segregationist Marvin Griffin in the 1962 Democratic primary to become, at age thirty-seven, the nation’s youngest governor. Sanders’s election marked a turning point in Georgia’s political history. With the demise of the county unit system, he became the first modern Georgia governor elected by popular vote and the first urban-ite elected since the 1920s.

Governor Sanders put education and governmental reform at the top of his agenda. Under his leadership, the state saw a vast increase in the number of public schools built and teachers hired. Minimum standards were implemented at all levels of the school curricula, and the Governor’s Honors Program was established. Funding for higher education in the state dramatically increased as well. College and university faculty received substantial raises, and more funds were appropriated for campus construction projects than the university system had received in more than thirty years.

Equally as important an achievement was Governor Sanders’s creation of a more moderate racial climate in the state during the turbulent later years of the civil rights movement. Though he himself was a segregationist, he was realistic enough to recognize the futility in continued resistance to federal legislation and court rulings and to refrain from the inflammatory racist rhetoric of his predecessors. He cooperated with both the Kennedy and Johnson administrations in insisting on compliance with the new civil rights laws. From his campaign on, Sanders stressed progress and worked to change Georgia’s image as a backward, racist, and rural state.

Another means of achieving that end came with Sanders’s efforts in reapportioning legislative and congressional districts to represent more fairly the state’s electorate. Spurred by a federal court order, he led a massive effort to reapportion both houses of the General Assembly and the state’s ten congressional districts. Along with the banishment of the county unit system in 1962 (of which he had been a beneficiary in his gubernatorial race), this reconfiguration provided further representation to the state’s cities, and thus black voters, than had earlier been the case.

Charles Spittal “Chuck” Robb, (Xi, 1961), is an American politician. A moderate Democrat, Robb served as Lieutenant Governor of Virginia from 1978 to 1982 and governor from 1982 to 1986. He later was a member of the U.S. Senate from 1989 until 2001. As governor, he was instrumental in creating the Super Tuesday primary that brought political power to the Southern states. He was also an early player in creating the Democratic Leadership Council. He was a strong vote-getter in Virginia in the 1980s and helped revive the Democratic Party in that state. He was considered a Presidential or at least Vice-Presidential prospect for a time.

After defeating Maurice Dawkins in 1988 with 76% of the vote, Robb, a former Marine, became the first senator ever to serve simultaneously on the Senate Armed Services, Foreign Relations, and Intelligence Committees. Ranked annually as one of the most ideologically centrist Senators, Robb often acted as a bridge between Democratic and Republican members, preferring background deal making to seeking the legislative limelight. In 1991, he was one of a handful of Democratic Senators to support authorizing the use of force to expel Iraqi forces from Kuwait.

Robb’s wife, Lynda Robb, also known as Lynda Bird Johnson, is the daughter of former U.S. President and fellow southern Democrat, Lyndon B. Johnson.

Robb narrowly defeated former Iran-Contra figure Oliver North in a 1994 reelection bid after popular Republican Senator John Warner refused to support his fellow Republican and instead backed third-party candidate J. Marshall Coleman. This campaign was documented in the 1996 film A Perfect Candidate. After two terms in the Senate, he was defeated in the 2000 election by his Republican opponent, George Allen, who was also a former governor. Robb was the only Democratic incumbent senator to be defeated in that election. After losing to Allen, Robb began teaching at George Mason University law school.

On February 6, 2004, Robb was appointed co-chair of the Iraq Intelligence Commission, an independent panel tasked with investigating U.S. intelligence surrounding the United States’ 2003 invasion of Iraq and Iraq’s weapons of mass destruction.

Times are changing

AT THE CHI PHI NATIONAL OFFICE.

JUST LOOK AT WHAT'S HAPPENING IN YOUR FRATERNITY!

Frank Kovacs

It has been just over a year since Brian Tenclinger, Director of Undergraduate Services, and Kim Godwin, Director of Communications, both came on staff. Vincent Verteramo also joined our team in the last year as our new Field Executive. As a result, Chi Phi increased both its staff and its excellent educational and administrative services.

Recently, we announced that we have added yet another staff member, Frank Kovacs, as the new Director of Alumni Development. Frank, Iota 1973, Iota Delta 1983, began his employment in early March and has already been to both Epsilon Delta for their 75th and to Epsilon Zeta for their 20th anniversary.

Kovacs' plans include increased programming and support for Chapter

Advisors, Alumni Associations and House Corporations. He also plans to engage alumni at Chapter events such as golf outings, banquets, and anniversaries. Other plans include the re-establishment of national Chi Phi Clubs. One of his major responsibilities will be to assist with new fundraising for the Chi Phi Educational Trust, which will include a planned giving strategy and a long-range capital campaign.

Being active on the national scene since his appointment as the third undergraduate member of the Grand Council, Kovacs has been the Grand Beta, Ritualistic Counselor and Council Member at large for the Grand Council. He also served two terms as Treasurer of the Educational Trust.

Kovacs currently serves as the Chi Phi Director for the Board of Directors of FRMT Ltd., a fraternity risk management trust organized to provide general liability insurance for national college social fraternities.

He has served as a member of the Audit Committee and the Claims and Legal Committee for FRMT Ltd. and currently serves as a member of the Underwriting Committee. He has served as a pro bono insurance advisor to Chi Phi for twenty-seven years. This position included the design and presentation of fire safety and legal liability seminars at various Chi Phi Regional Meetings and the College of Excellence. He has been a member of the National Interfraternity Conference Insurance Committee and was a contributing author to the Revised Edition of the Fraternity Executives Association Buying Guide. Also, he authored a monograph entitled "Preventive Medicine, A Synopsis of the Insurance Needs of a College Fraternity."

Prior to joining the national staff, Kovacs was in various sales, marketing, and underwriting positions in the insurance industry. In addition to owning his own insurance agency, he held various senior management positions for four insurance companies throughout his career. He holds two professional designations and has been a member of ten professional societies and trade organizations. He was a certified property and casualty insurance instructor for the Indiana Department of Insurance.

Frank and Esther, his wife of thirty-four wonderful years and a former Sweetheart of the Iota Chapter of Chi Phi, have two daughters. Melissa is currently a Visiting Assistant Professor at Allegheny College and a Research Fellow at the Center for Political Participation after receiving her Ph.D. from the University of Maryland this past spring. Melinda is an Assistant Prosecutor for Maricopa County Arizona. Esther teaches First Grade for the Center Grove Community School Corporation in Indiana.

In his spare time, Kovacs enjoys sitting in a duck blind or delicately balancing a fishing rod when he's not experimenting in his kitchen with Hungarian gourmet recipes or making homemade wine.

As mentioned earlier, the Fraternity and Educational Trust are embarking on a new fundraising plan. This is due in part to a large gift the Trust received after the passing of Bill Byrd, Nu 1953, last summer. Beginning in July, the Fraternity itself will no longer be actively soliciting alumni donations for its operations but will instead be focusing on more educational grants from the Trust for additional programs and future staff.

Furthermore, Chi Phi will begin publishing three editions of The Chi Phi Chakett per year. As a result in adding an edition of The Chakett, the Fraternity will be eliminating its current donor only magazine The True Blue. A new magazine printer was recently hired allowing the Fraternity to receive a significant cost savings on the publication of magazines.

Another change on the horizon, as you may already know, is that the Chi Phi College of Excellence (COE) will be free this year to the first 120 participants. This turn of events is due almost completely to a grant from the Bill Byrd gift. For more information on the upcoming COE, please see the ad on the last page of the magazine or visit the Chi Phi website at www.chiphi.org

Finally, we would like to announce that we are redeveloping our website. The new website will go live this summer and will provide our members and potential members with better access to information. A new online store will be incorporated on the website to allow members easy access to purchase Chi Phi items. We know that college students today make decisions about which college to attend and which organizations to join based in part on information obtained from the Internet. The company we have chosen is Big Fish, and if you would like to see other examples of their work please visit: www.chiomega.org or www.phideltatheta.org. The National Office would like to thank John Hutzler, Kappa Delta 1990, for all of the years of hard work he put in on the old website, without which the fraternity would not have been successful over the last few years.

MEN'S HEALTH ISSUES

Jonathan Y. Richmond, Zeta, 1962 Zeta Delta, 1962
Grand Gamma

LIFE IS FULL OF CHOICES.
MORE THAN THAT,
LIFE-AT LEAST A HEALTHY LIFE-IS CHOICE ITSELF.

We are born with a set of genes that will determine certain fundamental stipulations about our basic metabolism and physiology, indeed setting forth a fundamental blueprint for health, as well as a predilection for certain disease. The rest is up to us, to the environmental influences that will shape our lives, shape our minds, and shape our bodies. Yes, there are situations that we can't control, but there are many circumstances that we can that will help make life more enjoyable, more healthy, and more worthwhile.

Here are four critical areas within our control that each of us may find useful, no matter where we are in our life's journey.

Physical Health

As biological entities, we require a certain amount of fuel, of energy, to keep us alive, alert, and healthy. We in the United States have unfortunately been raised believing that bigger is better, that more is better; and, as a population, we have accumulated more fat than we can burn. Our diets are generally high in carbohydrates and fat, low in fiber and vegetables. The habits of youth, reinforced in college dorms and fast-food meals, often stay with us when we move off on our own. The stresses of seeking jobs, getting jobs, keeping jobs, and then trying to advance in our jobs often drives us to seeking comfort foods and drinks (all those wonderfully-tasting things we find immediately satisfying). Our tendency is to eat more, eat poorly. And this adds to our physiological stresses, causing our bodies to function less efficiently, leading inexorably to the problems associated with being overweight, having high blood pressure, poor cholesterol levels, and increased risk of heart-associated diseases.

We add to this mix the additional stresses of alcohol, drugs, tobacco, and a variety of other addictive stresses, often exacerbated by inadequate sleep, rest, or recreation patterns, and we-by choice-find ourselves eventually facing a number of related physical disorders.

If we want to maintain and improve our health status constantly, moderation is the key. We need to know and monitor our “numbers”-weight, blood pressure, blood sugar, and good/bad cholesterol levels. As men, we tend to shy away from physical examinations, tend to ignore tell-tale signs until we are in crisis situations. Good nutrition is critical. Healthy lifestyles will allow us to be more productive, stronger contributors to society, more focused on the values we embrace as Chi Phi Brothers.

Mental health

The status of our mental health, often reflected in our ability (or inability) to manage stress and to deal with negative events, fluctuates throughout our lives and can have a significant effect on our overall physical well-being. There are metabolic relationships between our food consumption-including the vitamins and other micronutrients that are found in a balanced diet-and our state of mind.

How do we feel about our body types? Are we comfortable with the way we look, the way we perform, our energy levels? Some things we can't control (height may be one of them); others (strength, stamina) can generally be improved if we choose to make the effort. Poor eyesight? We choose to get corrective lenses. Want blue eyes when they are naturally brown? Colored contact lenses work. Don't like the size or shape of your nose? See a plastic surgeon. These are called phenotypic changes-as opposed to changing our genetic make-up. It may not be too far in the future when we scientists will even be able to change some of that as well.

In the meantime, attitude adjustment can work wonders with improving the state of our mental health, how we view life, how we feel about ourselves. Having a positive outlook goes a long way. All of us seek simple acknowledgements that we are alive, that we exist, that we are (for the most part) doing the right thing. Most of us seek positive feed-back; some of us seek any feed-back in any form - recognition that we are worthy men.

One of the most stressful things that (unfortunately) happen to some undergraduates is hazing. Is hazing a necessary part of the Chi Phi experience? Does hazing make you a worthy man? Is that a positive reward? Did it make you a better person to be hazed, or to be a hazer? I don't think so. I certainly hope not.

It is important to know where we are and where we are going. An effective way to ensure that we are on track, to know we are accomplishing something, is to have written personal goals. Studies have indicated that those of us who set written “stretch” goals-goals that are challenging but attainable-will excel far beyond those men who did not prepare a personal vision statement. A satisfying personal reward follows every time we can check-off an accomplishment.

Sexual health

Wow, that's an important one, no matter where we are in our life's journey. We men obsess over our sexuality from the time our hormones kick in until the hormones fade-and then there is “Viagra”. (Isn't modern science wonderful?) Aren't we also glad there are PSA tests, particularly when they are negative!

But sexual health is not just having a healthy sex life. It's about choices, about respect for ourselves and our partners. As with so many other things in this 21st century, “things are a changin,” and with change comes new things to know, and knowledge is the power needed to make healthy decisions. Young men today are quite aware that abstinence will prevent HIV and other sexually-transmitted diseases (some of us remember the euphemisms, “social disease” and “venereal disease”). We are also aware that raging hormones are tough to control (particularly when clear thinking may be clouded by alcohol) and have learned that latex can be our next best friend. There are a dozen or more such diseases, from the old-standards, like syphilis and gonorrhea, to the newer ones like genital warts and Chlamydia (the fastest-spreading STD among men in the US today). Been checked recently? Men in non-monogamous relationships are at increased risk and should routinely be screened for STDs.

But respect for self and others are the issue of choice. Being in a respectful relationship is very different from “scoring.” And gentlemen, indeed Chi Phi Gentlemen, know that respect is a crucial part of any relationship. Walking the mile of shame should not be a legacy bestowed by a true gentleman. Date rape, Ecstasy, or drug-induced euphoria should simply not be terms associated with our Brotherhood.

A rather different concept from sex is that of love. Related? Hopefully so. In the end, it will be love that carries us all through the long-term relationships, the wonder of rearing children, the sustenance of strong family values, the fulfillment of our dreams. Which leads us to ...

Spiritual health

“Taking time to smell the flowers” is not just a botanical admonition; it is recognition that we all need to carve out time from our frenetic lives to reflect on the wonder of it all. It’s a time to focus inward on who we are, why we are, where we are going. It is a time for renewal, a time to dream, a time to listen.

Spirituality may include a religious component, but it is broader than that. Some of us are involved with yoga, some with seeking gurus on mountaintops, some with re-charging our batteries during long hikes along pristine wilderness trails. We are all custodians of the fragile home we call Earth; working to preserve it can be a spiritual experience.

Being a volunteer, giving back, reaching out to others, mentoring, teaching, being a role model is tremendously rewarding.

Clearly these four components of men’s health are inexorably intertwined. Each component has to be nurtured, given space in our lives, given the time that is needed to create and maintain the balance that will make us stronger, healthier, more focused men. Better Chi Phi men. Your choice.

ABOVE POLITICS

“Am I not destroying my enemies when I make friends of them?”

- ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Late on February 27, 2006 Maryland State Senator John Giannetti (Phi Lambda Theta, 1986) found himself doing the last thing one might expect a politician to do—saving the life of a rival.

Since his inauguration in 2002, popular Giannetti has faced many challenges, and his political rivals are quick to criticize his policies—especially Jim Rosapepe, Giannetti’s fellow Democrat and most-likely opponent for the next election. With friction between the two, many on both sides of the aisle have predicted that the political battle this fall would be among Maryland’s most heated campaigns.

Politics aside, Giannetti has, of course, been busy working for his constituents. Most recently, he has pushed for stricter punishments for drunk drivers, a more environmentally-friendly fleet of state vehicles, and legislation to extend the Washington Metrorail further into his district and beyond—eventually to the Baltimore-Washington International Airport.

But Giannetti faced one of his biggest challenges last February. After a long day’s work before heading home to his wife, Erin, Giannetti placed a take-out order at Maria’s Sicilian Ristorante in Annapolis, a popular hangout for Maryland politicians. When he arrived, his order wasn’t quite ready, so he decided to wait at the bar. Not long after taking a seat, he heard a commotion and looked up to notice a man stumbling forward and wheezing. It was none other than Former Delegate Rosapepe, who was choking on a piece of seafood fra diavolo.

Giannetti jumped into action and helped Rosapepe clear the obstruction by using the Heimlich maneuver, saving his rival’s life.

For his quick thinking, Giannetti gained notoriety across the country (courtesy of CNN, Fox News, The Washington Post, and countless other sources). On March 1, The Washington Post carried interviews with restaurant patrons, who called Giannetti’s actions “the Heimlich maneuver heard round the globe.” The newspaper also included Senate President Thomas V. Mike Miller’s reaction: “I would think you’d be very hard-pressed to say anything bad about a man who saved your life.”

When asked if his Chi Phi values came into play, Giannetti responded, “Sure, doing the right thing is a Chi Phi value; it’s part of Personal Integrity. Regardless of who is in peril, it’s your duty to rescue them if you can, even if the person is an enemy. I was just doing what I thought was right. In an emergency like that, you have to put aside personal feelings and take action.”

Although the battle between Giannetti and Rosapepe will continue, one might hope that it will be a bit more civil. “Maybe this means we’ll see a more uplifting campaign as a result,” said President Mille to The Washington Post.

Giannetti, who represents Prince George and Anne Arundel counties in Maryland (which includes Eta Theta Chapter at the University of Maryland) is a former Grand Council Officer and an active member of the National Capital Chi Phi Club. He was the Chartering Alpha of Phi Lambda Theta Chapter at Bucknell University and has been instrumental in the establishment of Chi Phi’s group at the University of Maryland, a group whom he now advises.

75th Anniversary Celebration

The Epsilon Delta Chapter of Chi Phi Fraternity at Oregon State University celebrated its 75th anniversary Saturday, March 11, 2006, at the Portland Hilton and Executive Tower. Turnout was impressive with 139 members and guests in attendance. Alumni flew in from many states across the country, including Alaska. In addition, several brothers from the National organization were present: Grand Alpha Rich Lane, Kappa Zeta 1993; Heritage and Traditions Counselor Henry Carnevale, Mu 1970; and Director of Alumni Development Frank Kovas, Iota 1973.

The event was organized on the alumni side by Ryan Lowe, Epsilon Delta 2005, and on the undergraduate side by Brent Edwards, Epsilon Delta 2006. Brother Lowe spent countless hours calling and emailing alumni to register. Brother Edwards put together an outstanding display of historic memorabilia and photos of the chapter and members throughout the decades.

After a social hour to get reacquainted with old friends, the crowd sang a rousing chorus of Gather Brothers, Brother Edwards said the Fraternity Prayer, and all sat for dinner. Several speakers presented information on topics familiar to most but about which many had not heard recently concerning the history of the Chapter. Grand Theta Ryan Capen, Epsilon Delta 2006, recited the history of the chapter, from its origins as the Oneonta Club in 1920 to a local fraternity under the name Tau Delta in 1921, when a local pastor, Reverend E.J. Harper, Pi 1885, mentored their path to chartering as a chapter of Chi Phi in 1931. The newly elected Alpha of the chapter, Grant Farr, Epsilon Delta 2007, then discussed his goals and course of action for the chapter in the coming year.

The president of the Northwest Chi Phi Association, Arvin Garg, Epsilon Delta 1998, recounted the activities of the association and how alumni continue to gather on a regular basis to strengthen and maintain the bonds of brotherhood. The president of the housing corporation, Jason Schnoor, Epsilon Delta 2001, gave an update on the current state of the structure and recent front room remodeling. Brother Lowe then introduced the newly formed Chapter Advisory Board and informed the alumni on the many ways that they can get involved to mentor and assist the chapter officers with their roles. The chairman of the Epsilon Delta Foundation, Josh Price, Epsilon Delta 1998, thanked the alumni for their support and noted that the Foundation had given out over $12,000 in scholarships since its creation in 2000.

The dinner ended with the presentation of twenty-five-year pins to twenty-two alumni who were present. Arguably the proudest moment of the evening came when four alumni received their fifty-year pins and a copy of the chronicles of Chi Phi.

Overall, the night was a huge success, thanks to the tremendous turnout of brothers and guests, many of whom had not seen each other since graduating several decades ago. Everyone was reminded that it was only through the continued alumni support of the chapter that Epsilon Delta will remain healthy and strong to celebrate many more anniversaries.

Epsilon Zeta Celebrates 20th Anniversary

Situated in the beautiful Northern Coast of California, The Epsilon Zeta Chapter of the Chi Phi Fraternity is located on the campus of Humboldt State University in Arcata, California, snugly nestled between the towering Redwoods and the breath-taking Pacific.

Year Chartered

April 2, 1987

In 1985, Joe Foggiato and Peter Ligget, two Humboldt State University Students who lived on the 3rd floor of Sunset Hall, made the effort to create a new Chi Phi Fraternity Chapter on the HSU campus. For two years, they networked and promoted the fraternity all over campus, steadily and rapidly gaining new members.

With the willing assistance of local alumni like Larry Myers of the Alpha Tau Chapter, the fledgling fraternity grew to more than 30 members and received its charter in 1987. The founding members of the new Epsilon Zeta Chapter of the Chi Phi Fraternity were: Peter Ligget as Alpha, Timothy Thomas Charters Mitchell as Beta, Joseph Anthony Foggiato as Gamma, and Robert Scott Calks as Delta. Other founding members included Scott Kiefer, James Dudley, Eric Wayland, and Geoff Hitchingham.

The Chartering Ceremonies were held in the Kate Buchanan Room at HSU, where other brothers, alumni, and fraternity officers from other parts of the country joined the new brothers, including Oregon State University, the University of California at Davis, and Atlanta, Georgia to the sign the Charter. These men had all gathered to sign the Charter and to celebrate this momentous and historic occasion for the new Epsilon Zeta Chapter of the Chi Phi Fraternity.

The Epsilon Zeta Chapter recruited many new brothers for the next several years, and it was these brothers who upheld the standards of brotherhood, friendship, trust, respect, and personal integrity that continued on even after the older brothers graduated and new brothers stepped up to take their places. These "new" brothers included men such as Mike Binsacca, Tim Charters, John Schutt, James Green, Eric Reimer, Art Fernandez, and many others. Many of these men have gone on to become noted leaders and businessmen, both locally and nationally.

Epsilon Zeta, although only twenty years old, draws its strength from the qualities of brotherhood, friendship, and personal integrity practiced everyday by the chapter's members. With the dedication of the past, present, and future brothers, the strength of Epsilon Zeta will only grow stronger in the years to come. Currently, the Epsilon Zeta Chapter consists of nine actives and three solid pledges, and although small compared to other Chi Phi chapters, EZ sets forth and maintains the same values of Chi Phis across the nation.

The Association of The Lambda Chapter Hosts Annual Alumni Banquet

On February 3, 2006, over 120 Chi Phi Actives and Alumni gathered at the University of California Faculty Club to celebrate the 131st anniversary of the founding of the Lambda Chapter of Chi Phi. It was a memorable event. During the banquet, we presented 50-year pins to six of our alumni and 25-year pins to about 20-30 of our alumni. We also welcomed the Class of 2006 into the ranks of the Alumni Association.

The Lambda Alumni Banquet has always been one of my favorite events. Where else can you hear stories from guys like Former Grand Alpha Dick Ham; or Carl Kindt who helped to build the San Francisco Bay Bridge; or Joseph and Jim Moore who grew a family business into a major producer of Liberty Ships during World War II?

Every year, guys from the 1940s, 1950s, and 1960s astound us with their description of Chapter events. There is a gap in the late 1960s to early 1970s because we were off campus, but former Chi Phi Educational Trust Chairman Jon Cosby helped to build a bridge to the next group of guys. If there were any empty seats, they have been filled from the guys from the 1970s and 1980s. These are the guys who pledged me and the guys whom I pledged. Then there are our young alumni, from the 1990s to present, many of whom have taken an idea and turned it into a successful business. Finally there are the actives. Without them there would be no chapter, and without a chapter, what's the use of having a banquet?

It's great to see an alumnus who is in his eighties or nineties and an active who is in his teens or twenties just sit down and talk about, well anything, especially stories about their adventures at the chapter. They have so much in common. It is a sight to see.

Sadly, many of our actives and alumni have passed away. Most recently, we lost Adam Grimshaw; he was just 22-years-old. But at the banquet, they are all remembered, and they are with us in our hearts.

Our banquet is purely a social event. This year, our banquet masters included

Mike Spiro, Josh DeFonzo, and David Su. It is their job to make sure that the evening goes smoothly, and they did a great job. Need a story or a joke: Call on Paul Manca or John Christian. Need a song: Just say the words, "Cal Drinking Song." Want to make a toast: Just stand up, tap your glass, and start speaking. It may sound like anarchy, but after all, this is Berkeley. Somehow our banquet masters always bring order from the chaos that makes the event so enjoyable.

The Lambda Alumni Banquet has become a regional Chi Phi event and is open to all Chi Phi Actives, Alumni and New Members from any chapter or colony. Many alumni were surprised to learn that they were welcome to attend the Lambda Alumni Banquet even though they did not attend Cal. But every year, we have hosted alumni from all over the country. If we had not done so, I never would have met my friends Malcolm Post from Yale or Kris Whitten from UC Davis. (Sorry Kris, but Lambda is not going to play Davis for The Cannon this year either.) There are hundreds if not thousands of Chi Phi Alumni who live and work in Northern California. Most live too far away from their own Chapters. If we did not host them at our banquet, where else would they go? And by the way, these guys have great stories, too!

This year, we were fortunate to have Executive Director Michael Azarian and Grand Council Members Jim Davis and Rocco Carnevale in attendance. It is always nice to see our Executive Director, members of the Grand Council, and members of the Chi Phi Educational Trust at the banquet. In prior years, former Grand Alpha Ron Frank made the long trek from Florida; and Jim Soderquist, Chairman of the Chi Phi Educational Trust, came from Virginia. Brian Tenclinger and Rich Kuerston, from the National Office, have made the trip, too. Former Trust Chairman Jon Cosby is a regular, but then he is from Lambda.

Just ask my friends George MacDonald, John McGuire, Peter Chew or Dave Davis if they remember the Lambda Banquet. They have good stories as well. Even Edge has made it to the banquet. In fact, Edge has made several banquets. Each one of these men is from a different chapter and each one is welcome at our banquet. Did I mention that Jon Cosby is from Lambda? He was my alumni advisor when I was an active.

Not so long ago, we were lucky to draw 50 actives and alumni. Now, however, through some creative marketing, our numbers have more than doubled. Many have asked how we turned the banquet around. It is no secret.

First, we had to find the right location. For nearly 20 years, we hosted the banquet in San Francisco at venues such as the Olympic Club, Mark Hopkins, Fior d'Italia, and Jack's. We would draw 75 or 80, but we could never quite reach 100. About four or five years ago, we moved the banquet to the UC Faculty Club, and our numbers simply took off. One year we over sold by 20 seats. The Faculty Club a great location because is right on campus and is only a short walk to the Chapter House. The food is good and the service is great.

Second, we had to select the right format: Cocktails at 6:00, dinner at 7:00, no guest speaker, and no host bar. We limit the amount of noise from the podium and let the actives and alumni just enjoy the evening.

Third, the Lambda Alumni Association subsidizes the event so that none of the actives and alumni are not left out. We also help defer a portion of the travel expenses for the National Office and Grand Council. That way we are not taking away the resources that are needed at other chapters.

Fourth, we get everyone involved. We give prizes to the honored classes, which included each class ending in '06, '96, '86, etc. Note: The Class of '56 and the Class of '66 both made a strong showing this year. It will be tough to match, but we are counting on the Class of '57 and the Class of '67 to do their part next year. We also give prizes for the oldest alumni, the alumni who traveled the farthest, and the graduating class. This year, I met Clem Lafenberg and his friends from the Class of 1956. According to Clem, they will all be back next year.

Fifth, the Chapter Alpha gives the State of the House Address. This is followed by much revelry. Then there is the State of the Alumni Address. On occasion, I have delivered this portion of the event. It goes something like this: "Gentlemen, The House Is Still Standing and There Are No Charges Pending." No more. No less. Then I introduce Mike Azarian and sit down.

Finally, we just stay out of the way. We have no formal program, and there is no head table. That way everyone is free to mingle.

We have two traditions that are strictly followed: First, there is no guest speaker. Alumni tried that in 1978, and it was simply a disaster. By the end of the banquet, there were chains of crumpled napkins, emptied water pitchers, and dismantled floral arrangements. Second, we don't ask for money. This is a social event, period. When we need money from our alumni, we ask for it. But our banquet is about making friends and renewing friendships. It is not a profit center. Enough said.

The date for 2007 Lambda Alumni banquet has already been set: February 2, 2007. Plenty of good seats are still available. By custom, the Lambda Alumni Banquet is always held on the first Friday in February. It sort of helps us keep our calendars clear. Next year, the banquet will be held on Ground Hog Day. But in all deference to Bill Murray, each Lambda Alumni Banquet is different. That is why I always attend.

So if you are ever in Berkeley around the first Friday in February, feel free to join us for the Lambda Alumni Banquet. Cocktails at 6:00, dinner at 7:00, no guest speaker, and no host bar. Plenty of good seats are still available...

Go Bears!!!

With Adam Masarek

By Owen Whitehurst, Gamma 2006

Upon first glance, Brother Adam Masarek, Gamma 2007, seems to be your average college student. He enjoys hanging out at the Chapter House, listening to music, and playing sports. Yet Brother Masarek has certain qualities that have set him apart from the crowd at Emory University. His commitment to philanthropy and service has caused him to be recognized by both his peers and mentors as an individual with an uncanny ability to give back to his fraternity, university, and community. As only a Junior at Emory University, Masarek has held leadership positions in seven philanthropic service organizations ranging from Habitat for Humanity to Students Helping Organize Awareness of the Holocaust while also serving as the Philanthropy Chairman for the Gamma Chapter of Chi Phi.

Masarek has accomplished a lot within pre-existing service organizations at Emory. However, it was his creation of a new service organization, the Green Parks Society, that has truly caught the eye of the students and faculty of Emory University as well as the community of Atlanta. As a result of his creation, Masarek was honored with the prestigious Knights of Emory Service Award in 2005 and the equally prestigious Joel Gellar Humanitarian Service Award in February of 2006. The Chakett sat down with Adam to talk to him about Green Parks Society and his experiences as a Chi Phi dedicated to selfless service.

Chakett: Thanks for talking with us today Adam. Can you tell us a little bit about where you grew up and what influenced you to come to Emory?

Brother Masarek: I've lived near Fort Lauderdale, Florida, since I was about three. However, I was born in Atlanta and all four of my grandparents went to Emory. My parents were actually married in Canon Chapel right on Campus. I guess I always saw myself coming here.

Chakett: What influenced your decision to join Chi Phi at Emory?

Brother Masarek: When I was in high school, all of my friends wanted to join fraternities, but I never did. I couldn't picture it as being productive in the long run. Once I got to Emory, though, I realized there was like a very homogenous attitude on campus, where everybody just seemed to be focused on their own future and not appreciating the opportunities associated with being in college. I felt like there was no real social, cultural, or community service identity at all. That may just be because we're a small school; I don't know. Most fraternities at Emory pigeonhole themselves into a single identity, whether it is the "soccer team" fraternity or the "pre-law" one. It was only with Chi Phi I felt there was an impressive mix of individuals who were all different but who were all committed to the same types of ideals. I also felt like Chi Phi would be the best place to get further involved in community service.

Chakett: At Emory, you started an award-winning service group known as the Green Parks Society. Can you tell us where this idea came from, and how you got started?

Brother Masarek: I was our Chapter's Philanthropy Chair last year along with Brother Matt Kohler, and we were always looking for fun, nearby, efficient community service activities for Chi Phi's to participate in. In the Fall of 2004, we went to a local park to help mulch flower beds and plant trees. It was a really nice day out, and we got a lot done on a Saturday afternoon. Matt and I were like, "Hey, we should do this every weekend," so we drew up some flyers and ordered some t-shirts. We've been going strong ever since. We go out to a different Atlanta park every Saturday afternoon to pitch in with whatever needs to be done. It really helps beautify the community and gives people a nice, clean place to spend time.

Chakett: How big is the Green Parks Society at Emory?

Brother Masarek: We have about 200 members at large, and between 20 and 30 people come to volunteer each Saturday afternoon. We're connected with about a dozen park alliances and environmental groups in the Atlanta area now. We also get equipment donated from the city and a few local businesses. The organization has definitely blossomed from its humble beginnings.

Chakett: What types of projects has the Green Parks Society worked on so far?

Brother Masarek: The city of Atlanta is pretty strapped for funds right now, and public park maintenance and security gets put on the backburner. We'll follow up on any cleanup or installation request we get, whether from a private neighborhood or from a city group. We've done everything from helping put up a playground in Midtown to picking up and disposing of needles in South Atlanta. We've developed sort of a sentimental attachment to a couple of real downtrodden public parks, and most weekends when we don't get a specific request from the city or a private group, we go to these two parks and try to put them back in order.

Chakett: The Green Parks Society is not a College Council funded group at Emory. Was this a disadvantage for you?

Brother Masarek: Becoming an official student organization at Emory involves a lot of red tape. When I started Green Parks Society, I felt that the best way to ensure its existence was to eliminate the hassles that surround receiving funding from Emory College. The way I saw it, there was no reason a bunch of us couldn't just go out every weekend and do some work. The rewards of being chartered aren't so monumental either. Chartered community service organizations at Emory traditionally only receive $100 - $200 per year from the university. In fact, the decision to keep Green Parks Society a non-chartered organization has really paid off. Because we don't have to deal with Emory College Council's red tape, we can focus all our time on working and fundraising. The whole point behind Green Parks Society was to create an organization that was doctored towards students' lives. We would rather spend a few days planning one of our large fundraising events at local restaurants than arguing with the university for extra money.

Chakett: Has Chi Phi at Emory played a large role in the success of the Green Parks Society?

Brother Masarek: Chi Phi has played a huge role in the success that Green Parks Society has become. Over half of the Brotherhood are members, and at its inception a year and a half ago, most of the volunteers who came out were Brothers. Our Chapter has a history of success in philanthropy and service, but in my opinion, this was usually due to the hard work of a few Brothers. With this project, I've been ecstatic to see so many Chi Phi's coming out to work on something that really benefits the community.

Chakett: Congratulations on receiving the Joel Gellar Humanitarian Service Award. Do you feel that this award will help the Green Parks Society continue to grow?

Brother Masarek: I hope so. More importantly, the award is providing us with the funding to install facilities and materials into a few Atlanta parks that are sorely in need. It's been nice to add something permanent to these parks, as opposed to constantly playing "catch up" by cleaning up the effects of miscreants and bad weather. We've put in durable trash cans, tennis courts, basketball nets, tetherball polls, and nature trail markers into two very dilapidated Atlanta parks. It's been really rewarding to see residents come out and enjoy the parks again. When we first started, you'd never see any kids because of all the broken glass and drug paraphernalia around. Now we see whole families playing in these parks.

Chakett: Where do you see the Green Parks Society going in the next 10 years?

Brother Masarek: The biggest obstacle will be continually recruiting freshmen to join our group. I am planning on attending graduate school in Atlanta, so hopefully in the year or two following graduation, I can help with recruitment and facilitating cleanups. If that goes well, then I see no limit to Green Parks Society's continued success. There are no other community service opportunities at Emory where you can show up late Saturday afternoon, get free food and drinks, and make a perceivable difference in few hours time. I really feel like the aspects that have made Green Parks so successful will continue to do so in the future.

Chakett: What piece of advice would you give other Chi Phi undergraduates who are interested in starting their own service organization?

Brother Masarek: Understand your audience. Most college kids sincerely want to help out and to give back to the community. The perception that college students are lazy is just incorrect. However, college students also want to go out on a Friday night. There is no reason a service organization cannot cater to the unique timetable of college students today. Give out some free food; offer some friendly start times; and you'll have an influx of strong backs and positive attitudes in no time.

Chakett: What are your plans for the future Brother Masarek?

Brother Masarek: I plan on pursuing a graduate degree in epidemiology, or the study of infectious disease patterns in populations. I really want to work and experiment in developing countries. I'm all about seeing the world. Maybe I can send The Chakett some pictures of Chi Phi's in action in sub-Saharan Africa.

Chakett: Thanks for your time, and the best of luck to you!

Brother Adam Masarek is currently a Junior at Emory University. He is the recipient of the Joel Gellar Humanitarian Service Award and the Knights of Emory Service Award as well as being a fellow of the Tritt Social Justice Fellowship. Brothers Remembered

Former Trustee Ben W. Greig, Nu 1945 died on August 13, 2005 in Houston, Texas. He was educated at the University of Texas before and after a tour of military duty that included study at Oklahoma State University. He served as a Combat Infantryman at the Battle of the Bulge during World War II. He was a very successful distributor of lawn furniture in the Ft. Lauderdale Florida area before retiring to Houston. Ben was an avid photographer and enjoyed traveling with his wife, Mary. He also served as a Trustee of the Chi Phi Educational Trust from 1981 to 1997. He was very active in the Nu Alumni Association and became involved with all of the Chi Phi chapters in Texas. In the spring of 1990, he and then Grand Alpha Clayton Scroggins traveled to each of the Texas chapters where Ben assessed their needs and provided advice.

Former Trustee John B. Long, Epsilon 1938 died on April 6, 2005 at his home in Richmond Virginia. After graduation from the University of North Carolina, he and his father founded the Long Super Mine Car Company. John patented more than 60 mining equipment designs including innovations in piggyback miners, extendable rails, rock dusters, and mantrips (This train-like vehicle, which brings the miners down to and up from the coal mine). Attending Hampton-Sydney and North Carolina at Chapel Hill during the Depression, John received much-needed financial assistance from the Chi Phi Educational Trust. He was able to repay that assistance as a New Founder of Chi Phi and a Trustee of the Educational Trust from 1989 to 1994. John pledged Chi Phi in 1934 as a 16-year-old freshman from a small mining town. In 1936, he transferred to Chapel Hill, which was down to 3,000 students, and to Alpha-Alpha, which was down to eight actives. With support from Judge Rosser, then Grand Alpha, rush went well and membership doubled. He married Katherine Wicker in 1943 and had four children including one Chi Phi, Armistead Long, Gamma 1978.

Former Grand Zeta John D. Craft, Iota Delta 1961 died January 26, 2006 in Indianapolis, Indiana. After graduating from Indiana University, he was employed with Grain Dealers Mutual Insurance Company for more than 35 years. John was initiated in the Iota Delta chapter and was very active in the Iota Delta Alumni Association. He organized and chaired many of their various anniversary celebrations throughout the history of the chapter. He was instrumental in putting together the 1964 Congress and served as Grand Zeta from 1968 to 1972. John also served on the national scene as Co-chairman of the 150th Anniversary of Chi Phi. John's funeral was attended by many Chi Phi's where the Memorial Ceremony was performed at gravesite. John will be remembered as a fun-loving brother who always had time to listen to the problems of the active brothers during his many visits to the house.

A BOND, A BROTHERHOOD...A PRIVILEGE

Chi Phi Spring 2006 Expansion:

Brian Tenclinger, Director of Undergraduate Services

During a recent trip to Winthrop University, the members of one of Chi Phi's newest Colonies were asked: "What does Chi Phi mean to you now that you've joined?" If the responses shared by the undergraduates can predict the success of this Colony, then the future of our Fraternity is in very good hands.

Located just thirty minutes south of Charlotte, North Carolina, Winthrop University in Rock Hill, South Carolina, is home to one of our newest Colonies. Winthrop's history dates back to 1886 when 21 students gathered in a borrowed one-room building in Columbia, South Carolina. Winthrop's mission was originally to educate teachers, and since the university's inception, student success has always been the primary objective.

During the last hundred years, Winthrop has changed dramatically since moving to its permanent Rock Hill home in 1895, growing from a single classroom to a comprehensive university of distinction. Basketball fans will know Winthrop University for its recent appearance in the NCAA playoffs. Students who attend Winthrop enjoy a medium-sized residential institution with national-caliber academic programs. For a select group of men at Winthrop, they are enjoying the new bonds of brotherhood as founding fathers of the Winthrop Colony.

During the spring of 2004, the Interfraternity Council at Winthrop began holding conversations about fraternity expansion for the first time in ten years. The Greek Life staff at Winthrop helped the Interfraternity Council conduct a feasibility study and quickly discovered that the campus was ready to welcome a new men's organization. After a lengthy search that included expansion proposals from several international men's fraternities, Chi Phi received the first spot to start a new colony.

The expansion team began the recruitment efforts in mid-January 2006 and pinned twenty-one founding fathers on Sunday, February 5. Chi Phi took the Winthrop community by storm conducting a non-stop marketing and membership recruitment campaign that attracted a very diverse group of men. Along the way, members of the National Staff heard comments from Winthrop administrators and sorority women such as, "We can't believe you were able to recruit such a great group of men!" And, "No one has been able to recruit such a diverse group of guys who truly are gentlemen until Chi Phi came along!" Founding father Michael Alway describes his membership this way: "To me, Chi Phi is exceptional and well respected. Chi Phi represents gentlemen at Winthrop."

And diverse these men truly are! Of the twenty-one founding fathers, two are members of the United States Armed Forces, one serves as a resident advisor, ten are members of the National Honor Society, two are Eagle Scouts, nine perform in collegiate music ensembles, and all are involved in campus and community activities.

Since the new-member pinning ceremony, the Winthrop Colony has been forging new relationships and keeping a very busy social calendar. The Colony has co-sponsored an alcohol-free Game Night in the Dinkins Student Center with the staff from Recreation Sports. The men meet weekly for lunch on campus in a dining hall; they've participated in the campus intramural events, have volunteered at the Boys and Girls Club in Charlotte, have presented flowers to every sorority, and have conducted a fund-raiser to establish a healthy savings account. The founding fathers are working diligently to create a reputation that mirrors the timeless values of truth, honor, and personal integrity. The words of Colony Alpha Mac McDougal clearly articulate what Chi Phi is all about at Winthrop University: "Not a handshake, but a bond; not a friendship, but a brotherhood; not an opportunity, but a privilege." It is truly a privilege to welcome these men into the Chi Phi family.

Brothers of the of the Winthrop Colony

Back to Sigma Zeta

By: Vincent Verteramo, Field Executive

Another colony joined the Chi Phi family in early March 2006. Thanks to the efforts of Regional Alumni Counselor Paul "Pablo" Polichronakis (Theta '02) and alumnus Gary Bloom (Sigma Zeta '00), Theta Chapter (Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute), along with alumni from Zeta Theta (SUNY Oneonta), Kappa Delta (University of Rochester), Chi Phi recently reorganized the Sigma Zeta Colony at the University of Albany. Sigma Zeta Colony existed at the University of Albany until 1998 and produced a group of members, many of whom remain in close contact today.

While the National Office staff was working with Brothers Polichronakis and Bloom, a group of Brothers from the Kappa Delta Chapter befriended a campus leader named Christian O'Brien. Christian was invited to join Kappa Delta Chapter but declined as he was soon going to transfer to the University of Albany. He was encouraged by members of Kappa Delta to contact the National Office and inquire about re-starting Sigma Zeta Colony. Within a two-week period, members of the National Office were communicating with Sigma Zeta alumni, a dedicated Regional Alumni Counselor, and a very enthusiastic transfer student, Christian O'Brien, who had already recruited a core group of men interested in joining Chi Phi Fraternity.

As the conversations between these men continued, Brian Tenclinger, Director of Undergraduate Services, made contact with the University of Albany to discuss the specifics about bringing Chi Phi back to the institution as a recognized student organization. Fraternities and sororities are invited guests at colleges and universities. Given the history at the University of Albany, it was important to gain institutional support from the onset to help ensure a smooth and healthy return. The university's Committee on Greek Affairs reviewed two proposals-one from the undergraduate interest group and the other from the National Fraternity. Both proposals received unanimous support from the committee to begin the expansion process in the spring 2006.

The Sigma Zeta Colony returned to the campus of SUNY Albany on March 5. The new breed of Sigma Zetas has its sights set on becoming one of Albany's strongest Greek Letter organizations. Currently, Sigma Zeta is working closely with Pablo Polichronakis (Regional Alumni Counselor) and the original Sigma Zeta Colony members.

The official colonization came in early March with six men taking on the daunting task of starting a fraternity from scratch. The six men all came from different walks of life, ranging from retired military to traditional and non-traditional aged students. With our efforts, we discovered the true essence of being Chi Phi's: Despite our differences, we formed a cohesive brotherhood and worked toward common goals and greatness.

During our recolonization, Br. Richard Kuerston, Mu Zeta 2002, was given the task of training our newest brothers. The new officers of Sigma Zeta also went through an officer "boot camp" for their first days as a colony. The "boot camp" prepared members to learn their constitutional responsibilities; to devise a delegation; and to manage their colony properly, replete with successful meetings and financial planning. These activities had the men meeting twice a day: once in a one-on-one setting with Br. Kuerston and once as an entire colony. Also, the new brothers learned marketing schemes and goal setting.

The first four days of the new Sigma Zeta was truly a whirlwind of firsts and a crash-course in fraternity life. The following week, however, Br. Vincent Verteramo, Zeta Theta 2005 joined with the colony and Br. Kuerston to perform the first recruitment week. One of the major outcomes from this meeting was the colony's desire to double its size before initiation, which would increase membership to twelve.

The following week was filled with lots of hard work. For four days, colony members accompanied Br. Verteramo at information tables trying to spread the word about Chi Phi's arrival on campus. Moreover, recruitment events were held three consecutive nights in a row; we took a tour of the Theta Chapter, ate dinner during a private party at Jillian's Restaurant, and spent a casual evening bowling.

"We never thought recruitment could be so demanding and frustrating," offered many members of the colony. As a result of Sigma Zeta's hard work, six bids were distributed in four days-four men accepted, bringing the chapter closer to its goal of doubling its size.

In its early days as a colony, the men of Sigma Zeta learned a valuable lesson: It takes time and hard work to become the best.

By: Affinity Marketing Consultants, Inc.

As an initiated member of Chi Phi, you appreciate the significance of the name and symbols of our Fraternity. To protect the integrity of our name, Chi Phi registered our marks with the United States Patent and Trademark Office. These marks include the name Chi Phi, Greek letters of Organization, badge, the crest, and other important names as specified by Chi Phi from time to time.

Protecting our name is our right and our responsibility—one that is also recognized by the courts. In April 2000, a District Court ruled that fraternities and sororities have the right to enforce and protect their registered trademarks. For years, companies selling merchandise bearing the logo or symbols of a university, professional sports team, or organization had to secure permission to use those logos or symbols because they were recognized as the “trigger mechanism for sale of the product.” In the early 1980s, some courts refused to recognize that fraternities and sororities should have the same right to protect their marks.

Since the Court’s decision, Chi Phi is joining numerous other Greek organizations in trademark protection. We formed an alliance with Affinity Marketing Consultants, Inc., experts in administering comprehensive licensing programs for Greek organizations. Their goal is to license a variety of companies who provide quality, licensed Chi Phi products at reasonable prices and with exceptional service. To date, we have agreements with about 35 vendors that offer products and services such as jewelry, apparel, and stationery.

Chi Phi has introduced a link to www.GreekLicensing.com, where you’ll be able to locate the complete list of our licensed vendors and search for specific products. You’ll be able to browse through those vendors’ online catalogs as well. The site will be updated frequently as our roster of licensed vendors will continue to grow and the variety of quality products available to you will increase.

You associate great memories with Chi Phi and its symbols—especially, your Initiation, a retreat, alumni events. To preserve those memories and to stop companies who misuse Chi Phi’s symbols for personal profit because they are not familiar with the true meaning of Chi Phi ideals and mission, we must take a stand. By refusing to purchase products that do not carry the Greek Licensed Product seal, we can ensure that Chi Phi always stands for quality.

If you have questions about licensing or want more information on how to get your local vendor and campus bookstore licensed, please contact Vendors@GreekLicensing.com.

Quality Control... The driving force behind Chi Phi's licensing program.

If you care about protecting Chi Phi’s heritage, please take a few minutes to read the following case study.

One year ago at a sorority chapter, a national stationery company sales representative coerced a chapter officer into purchasing $5,000 worth of stationery! Afraid that they had been scammed and stuck with the bill, the chapter contacted the National Office for advice and assistance. Because the sorority had a well-established licensing program and the stationery company was not authorized to use the trademarks, the company was forced to reimburse the chapter.

Chapters can rest assured that they will be treated fairly and receive quality products from licensed vendors. In the event a chapter does experience problems with a vendor, the licensing program is here to support and help resolve the situation.

If you have a problem with a vendor, get some help from Chi Phi’s licensing company at www.GreekLicensing.com, or e-mail vendors@GreekLicensing.com.

What does quality control have to do with licensing and how does that impact you?

The Chi Phi Fraternity is the exclusive owner of Chi Phi trademarks, which include the Greek letters, the crest, badge, and name “Chi Phi.” In order to protect the heritage of our marks and to maintain ownership of them, we must have a program in place to monitor the use of our trademarks. This is why we have our licensing program. Our goal is to license only vendors that produce quality Chi Phi merchandise and provide excellent customer service. Those vendors that we have given permission to utilize our marks are called licensed vendors. When you purchase products from licensed vendors, you are supporting Chi Phi and our licensing program and protecting the history and heritage of our fraternity; our Founders would be proud!

How do you know if a vendor has received approval to sell Chi Phi products?

Look for the following symbol, the Greek Licensed Product logo, which signifies that the vendor sells only high-quality merchandise and provides excellent customer service. Also, visit www.GreekLicensing.com to see the latest selection of incredible Chi Phi products.

Trademark Protection... A positive image doesn't always come without effort.

Chi Phi cares about its public image and that all members are able to purchase high-quality products that are truly reflective of our values.

Here is an example of why trademark protection is necessary...

This year, while surfing the web, a fraternity member found an incredibly offensive use of Tri Delta trademarks. The web site address involved the word “xxxsorority.” This website contained pornographic images and other offensive material referring to Tri Delta. Because of their licensing program and consistent protection of their marks, Delta Delta Delta was able to fight back-and win!

If you run across a vendor who is selling offensive products or services in conjunction with the name or symbols of Chi Phi, please e-mail Vendors@GreekLicensing.com. Our licensing company will follow up with this vendor to ensure they do not continue to market products that will reflect poorly upon Chi Phi.

How does trademark protection impact you?

Rule: To own it, you must control it!

If Chi Phi did not have a licensing program in place to monitor the use of our symbols (our Greek letters, the crest, badge and the name “Chi Phi”), we could risk losing control and ownership of our trademarks. We know you would do anything necessary to prevent this from happening-and so will Chi Phi!

Have you ever played the game “telephone”? You know, the game where one person passes along a message from one person to another until it reaches the original sender? Isn't it funny how mixed up and distorted the message gets? Our trademarks are no different.

Just think of how different Chi Phi's crest would look like if it were passed from one vendor to another without any quality control. Over time, Chi Phi's symbols would look drastically different than the original symbols. We want to avoid distortion of our marks so that all Chi Phi's can have a common experience with the right crest, badge, flag, and colors.

Finally, and most importantly, as seen from the above example with Tri Delta, if our marks are used inappropriately, it will reflect poorly upon our organization and you, our member. Licensing is designed to protect Chi Phi and to present a positive public image.

Our goal is to license only vendors who offer quality Chi Phi merchandise and provide excellent customer service. The companies that we give permission to use our trademarks are called “licensed vendors.” When you purchase products from licensed vendors, you are supporting Chi Phi and our licensing program and protecting the history and heritage of our fraternity.

How do you know if a vendor has received approval to sell Chi Phi products?

Look for the following symbol, the Greek Licensed Product logo, which signifies that the vendor sells only licensed high-quality merchandise and provides excellent customer service. Also, visit www.GreekLicensing.com to see the latest selection of incredible Chi Phi products.

Our goal...

To have only high quality Chi Phi products available to our membership, their families and friends.

*Support licensed vendors -
Help us reach our goal!*

Why Work with Licensed Vendors?

The relationship between the fraternity and licensed vendors is a win-win situation. A licensed vendor agrees to work with Chi Phi to ensure proper use of our trademarks, to sell high-quality products at reasonable prices, and to offer good customer service. In exchange, approved vendors are given the approval to produce products and/or services in association with our organization.

How Can You Help

Alumni and collegians play an important role in the success of the licensing program. Licensed manufacturers will place a special Greek Licensed Product Logo (see below) designed for members of AMC on all items bearing Chi Phi symbols. Look for this logo when shopping in campus bookstores, in Greek specialty stores, with catalogs, and on web sites. Members who buy products with this special seal can do so with confidence, knowing that the fraternity has approved the product and that they are purchasing from a licensed vendor. In addition, chapters and alumni associations can support the program by having special items produced only by licensed vendors.

To locate an always up-to-date list of Chi Phi's officially licensed vendors, please visit www.greeklicensing.com.

If you would like to nominate to a vendor to become licensed with our organization, please send their company information including name, address, phone, e-mail and web to vendors@greeklicensing.com.

Making Copies...

it is something many of us do hundreds of times a day and never think about it. The next time you are standing in front of the copy machine, take a moment to think about a Chi Phi Fraternity member's role in this daily process.

Dr. George R. Mott,
Alpha-Chi 1943, with granddaughter Lucy.

George Robson Mott II, Alpha-Chi 1943, was born in Syracuse, N.Y., the son of Reverend Mott, Sr., and Mrs. Martha Mott. He moved to Livonia, N.Y., when he was just six following the death of his father. Mott's long list of achievements began in 1939 when he graduated as Salutatorian. The following year he began college at Ohio Wesleyan University, where he joined the Alpha-Chi chapter and began his major in Physics and Mathematics. While in college, Brother Mott participated in both concert and marching band, which later led to him being the chorus director for the chapter during his junior and senior years. He also served the fraternity as Delta during this same time. He began building and renovating areas of the chapter facility, most notably the darkroom that he created in the basement, which allowed for a more in-depth pictorial history of the chapter during his years. Brother Mott was also the recipient of two Sparks Medals during his years at Ohio Wesleyan University.

Following graduation, Brother Mott worked for the United States Naval Research Laboratory (NRL) in Washington, D.C., testing the suitability of electronic devices in naval equipment. These included components for radios and radar, as well as the durability of components when affected by the shock and vibrations of equipment on naval vessels during wartime. The US Naval Reserves commissioned George Mott as an Ensign during his time working as a civilian, in order to ensure continuity of the work being done. Shortly after his commissioning, George married Ruth Woolston and continued to work for the NRL until the conclusion of World War II.

Following the war, Brother Mott returned to school; this time for a PhD in Physics from the University of Rochester. During his first year at Rochester, the Physics Department received a contract with the U.S. Navy to design an "atom smasher" Synchro-Cyclotron for its nuclear research program. Brother Mott was chosen as one of the graduate assistants to work on the team, which involved a move to the University of California - Berkeley. At the age of 31, while working on his doctoral degree, Brother Mott was diagnosed with Polio, which caused him to lose the previous levels of use of his right hand, almost to the point of no use at all. Dr. Mott graduated with his PhD in 1952 and was quickly hired by a company known at the time as The Haloid Company.

The Haloid Company was a manufacturer of photographic and photocopy papers and cameras. These machines produced documents with white writing on a black background and were of a very low quality. Battelle Memorial Institute partnered with Haloid to commercialize the patents of Chester Carlson, the owner and CEO of Haloid, for an electro-photographic process for making copies. Dr. Mott was a part of the team of researchers assigned to creating the methods and materials necessary to make the process of photocopying possible.

The first of these machines was the Xerox 914, so called because it could only produce copies that measured 9" x 14". Brother Mott played a role in over 25 of the patents submitted during the early years of creating these new machines. His name is not on these patents, but he was given stock in the Haloid Company as compensation for his work. This new electro-photographic process is called xerography. As the company grew and advancements were made, the name was changed to Haloid-Xerox, and later to Xerox Corporation. Dr. Mott's service continued with Xerox for 30 years and included work on improvements in current copy machines and the possibility of color copying. The first color copiers created by Brother Mott and his team were dismissed by the marketing department at Xerox as "probably not marketable". The company later had to address the fact that their neglect of this invention cost the company in future copier production.

Following his retirement from Xerox, Dr. Mott began work with Mr. Van Auken, and the men created a very small copier that was marketed for in-home use by the Xerox Corporation. Brother Mott fully retired following this invention, but he never stopped working and making improvements to aspects of life around him. His passion for woodworking is visible in the sanctuary of the Fort Myers Congregational United Church of Christ. Brother Mott's wife passed away in the mid-1990s; he later married his second wife, Phyllis Risch, in June 1998. Dr. Mott and his wife still reside in Florida.

Brother Mott continued his connection to Chi Phi Fraternity through his friendships with fellow Alpha-Chi brothers. He never allowed his disabilities to limit what he has been able to accomplish in his life, and he was a role model for generations of fraternity men. His character and devotion are what help him to make life better for those around him. This models what Chi Phi Fraternity strives to develop within our members. "To build better men through lifelong friendships, leadership opportunities, and character development" is the mission of the fraternity, and Chi Phi is proud that Dr. George Mott II continued to live this mission everyday before entering the Chapter Eternal in February, 2006.

THE GRAPEVINE OF CHI PHI

Do you know what all is going on in The Chi Phi Fraternity? Do you get the Grapevine? If not, see what you are missing and get signed-up today.

The Chi Phi Grapevine is a monthly electronic newsletter sent to all members with a valid email address on file at the National Office. Each month we tell you about:

- Educational Programs
- Alumni News
- Staff Travels
- Expansion
- Chartering
- Grand Council and Educational Trust News
- Scholarship and Awards Applications
- and more

One of the new favorites in the Grapevine is the “Clicks for Chi Phi.” This section is an opportunity for Chapters, Colonies, Clubs, and Alumni Associations to let us know the great positive things they are doing. If you have “clicks” you would like added, please contact Kim Godwin at godwin@chphi.org.

We want to let everyone know about the great activities in our organization, but right now only about 11,000 of you are receiving the newsletter. If you are not receiving the Grapevine and would like to start, please send an email to Patty Fisher at fisher@chphi.org and we will get you added.

UGA Lifetime Friend And Supporter William C. 'Bill' Hartman Dies At Age 90

ATHENS, Ga. — College Football Hall of Fame member William C. “Bill” Hartman, Eta 1938, who spent a lifetime supporting the University of Georgia and its athletic program, passed away in an Athens hospital in March 2006 after a short illness one day before his 91st birthday.

A great college player in the 1930’s at UGA, he later played professional football, coached under Wally Butts for the Bulldogs, and became nationally known as Georgia’s volunteer kicking coach turning out numerous pro punters and kickers including Kevin Butler, John Kasay, Bucky Dilts, and Todd Peterson. “Coach Hartman has been an integral part of our athletic program over many, many years,” said UGA Director of Athletics Damon Evans. “He played a significant role in the growth and success of the Athletic Association and has touched the lives of Georgia people both young and old for the better part of a century. He has a very big place in the history and tradition of the University of Georgia.”

UGA President Michael F. Adams said that “Bill Hartman will long be remembered as one of those stalwarts responsible for today’s success in UGA’s athletics programs. His lifetime contributions to his alma mater were exemplary and his impact on countless students immeasurable. He was a true gentleman, loved and admired by so many, and he will be greatly missed. The university sends heartfelt condolences to Coach Hartman’s family and friends.”

Hartman was one of the first to welcome head coach Vince Dooley to Athens in 1964 and became one of Dooley’s closest friends and advisors.

“From a personal standpoint, Coach Hartman has always been a loyal friend and confidant,” said Dooley. “I don’t know of anyone who has made more contributions to the University—both in academics and athletics—than Bill. He’s always been a strong University man in all respects. He and Dan Magill are probably the two greatest resources I had during my 40-plus years at Georgia.”

Hartman was born in Thomaston, Ga., on March 17, 1915, but his football career began while attending public schools in Madison where he often scrimmaged against the powerful prep team at Madison A&M coached by Wally Butts. After graduation, his family moved to Milledgeville—the same year Butts became coach at Georgia Military College—and Hartman played the next two years at GMC.

Hartman was highly recruited by southern schools, but decided on Georgia where he always wanted to play. He became one of the Bulldogs’ greatest fullbacks and linebackers and was named both All-SEC and All-American as a senior and captain of the 1937 team. Many say his best all-around performance came against Fordham and the “seven blocks of granite” in 1936 at the Polo Grounds in New York. Sportswriters called his performance “magnificent” as undermanned Georgia battled Fordham to a 7-7 tie which knocked the Rams out of Rose Bowl contention.

In 1937, Hartman also became known for his mighty punts including an 82-yarder against Tulane. Two weeks later against Georgia Tech, he fielded a second-half kickoff at the seven yard line and after fumbling the ball, he nonchalantly picked it up with his usual calm, and raced 93-yards for the tying touchdown

After graduation, Hartman moved to Green Bay, Wisconsin, while working for the Coca Cola Company despite being continually recruited by the Washington Redskins. He finally signed with the Redskins for $250 per game and a no-cut contract.

Washington intended for Hartman to back up legendary tailback Sammy Baugh. But the great NFL passer was hurt before the first game and Hartman started the first six games of the season. He won the first pro game he had ever seen, 24-22, over the Philadelphia Eagles by throwing an 87-yard touchdown pass in the fourth quarter. He also completed 13 consecutive passes in a game against Brooklyn. But he turned his back on the NFL the following year opting to return to the University as backfield coach under his old friend and mentor, Wally Butts.

He helped lead Georgia to victories in both the Orange and Rose Bowls before entering World War Two in the Army’s Counter-Intelligence Corps. When he returned to Athens, he entered the insurance business although he continued to coach almost full time until 1956. However, he returned to the field in the early ‘70’s as a volunteer to coach Vince Dooley’s kickers where he remained until the mid-‘90’s. He developed a national reputation for coaching many outstanding punters and place-kickers that went on to play in the NFL including Kevin Butler, Allan Leavitt, Rex Robinson, John Kasay, Todd Peterson, Bucky Dilts, and Mike Garrett.

Throughout his coaching and insurance careers, Hartman at the same time had become one of the University’s greatest friends and supporters. He became a University of Georgia Foundation Trustee, president of the University’s Alumni Association, co-chairman of the Tech-Georgia Development Fund, and in 1960 became chairman of the Georgia Student Educational Fund—a position he still holds—which was originally formed to raise private funds for athletic scholarships.

The former Georgia football captain has been a civic leader of the first order serving as President of the Athens Jaycees, Athens Chamber of Commerce, Athens Country Club, and Athens Community Chest. A member of the Athens City Council from 1957 - 1960, he served as Mayor Pro Tem in 1960. He twice served as President of the UGA Alumni Society in 1951 and ‘52. He was awarded the first Distinguished Alumni Award from the College of Business in 1965, Alumni Society’s Distinguished Alumni Award in 1963-64, the Abraham Baldwin Award in 1982, and the Blue Key Award in 1992.

Hartman was inducted into the “Sports Illustrated Silver Anniversary All America Team” in 1962, the Georgia Sports Hall of Fame in 1981, and the National College Football Hall of Fame in 1984. In 1992, the Georgia Athletic Association and University of Georgia announced the creation of the “Bill Hartman Award” for the purpose of recognizing former Bulldog student-athletes who have distinguished themselves as alumni. Some of the most notable recipients include Fran Tarkenton, Billy Payne, Dr. Tommy Lyons, Dan Magill, Dr. Tommy Lawhorne, Coach Billy Henderson, and former Lt. Governor Pierre Howard. Better than ever!

Thanks to two years of program development, Chi Phi's premier leadership program is better than ever. Thanks to the generosity of the Chi Phi Educational Trust, it's now free.

"COE helped me prepare and react to the challenges facing my Chapter. It is absolutely incredible to meet, learn, and debate with so many Chi Phi Brothers from all over the country."

—Josh Curtin, Delta Pi Chapter
Georgia Southwestern State University

"COE was awesome. I met some of my greatest Chi Phi friends there from across the country."

—Kenso Kagawa, Sigma Delta Chapter
University of California, Davis

"Everyone there is great. They're ready to just throw information at you. They're ready to help you and your Chapter, 100%."

—Tom Roebuck, Delta Theta Chapter
Clemson University

"Attending COE was truly one of my greatest Chi Phi experiences. Every Brother should attend."

—Damien Mach, Mu Zeta Chapter
University of Denver

"I never would have come to see things the way I do if it weren't for COE. It helped me remember why I was proud to be a Chi Phi. In 5 days it put my entire Fraternity experience into perspective."
